Dear President Obama and Attorney General Holder:

This is the seventh in a series of letters to you urging that you restore the rule of law in America and release innocent people, mostly Muslims, who were illegally targeted and convicted following 9/11. In our first letter to you on February 16, 2009, we requested a review of all the cases in which defendants were convicted under a program referred to by the government as “preemptive prosecution”—that is, prosecuting people before they commit a crime based on suspicions that they might commit a crime in the future. In our second letter to you on April 4, 2009, we asked for a review of certain specific cases of preemptive prosecution that we believe resulted in unjust convictions or detentions. In our third letter on May 21, 2009, we requested that the Justice Department cease various practices that were illegal and that often resulted in unjust convictions and incarcerations, such as the use of agents provocateur, secret detention of suspects, solitary confinement, special Muslim prisons, and the invocation of the State Secrets Doctrine to block consideration of illegal wiretapping and extraordinary rendition. In our fourth letter on July 8, 2009, we requested exoneration of innocent Muslims illegally entrapped by the use of agents provocateur. In our fifth letter on November 16, 2009, we requested exoneration for innocent Muslims engaged in charitable work whose assets were seized without due process and whose laudable activities were unjustly criminalized. In our sixth letter of March 8, 2010, we requested reform of the Material Support of Terrorism statutes, which criminalize innocent behavior and fail to give notice as to what activities might be illegal.

To date, we have received no meaningful response from you to any of the issues that we have raised. Moreover, the illegal practices that we objected to have continued. In this seventh letter, we want to examine why this is—that is to say, why have the Obama Administration and the Office of the Attorney General of the United States continued to act with the same illegal conduct that started under the Bush Administration?

One theory points to an incompetent, corrupted, and complicit Office of Professional Responsibility (OPR) within the Justice Department. The U.S. government, and especially the Department of Justice, cannot act in violation of the very laws it is supposed to enforce. The OPR acts within the Justice Department as a watchdog agency to ensure that lawyers working there act at all times within the law and the ethical guidelines of their profession, which require that they do justice rather than merely obtain convictions by any means possible. Thus Justice Department lawyers should not tolerate illegal wiretapping by the government, or permit agents provocateur to entrap innocent citizens, or shut down charities without due process of law, or fail to turn over to the defense exculpatory information, or permit other abuses of the law that they know will result in injustice or deny defendants a fair trial. Any Justice Department lawyer who permits such abuses should be disciplined by the OPR.

If the OPR fails to perform its watchdog function, then it is a signal to Justice Department lawyers that they can violate their professional responsibilities without fear of sanctions. For example, in U.S. v. Theodore F. Stevens, Alaska's Senator Ted Stevens was prosecuted for and convicted of bribery. During the case, an FBI agent filed a complaint that the prosecution lawyers had failed to disclose exculpatory evidence, and the prosecution team voluntarily reported themselves to the OPR. The OPR repeatedly told the trial judge that it would conduct an investigation of the allegations and that the trial judge did not have to inquire further. After the conviction, a new team of Justice Department lawyers was appointed, and reported that the original prosecution team had indeed suppressed numerous memos exculpatory to the defense that were central to the issues of the case. As a result, the Justice Department on its own motion moved to dismiss the charges, and the trial judge, Hon. Emmet Sullivan, on April 7, 2009 granted the motion and referred the conduct of the six original members of the prosecution trial team to a special prosecutor.

At the dismissal hearing six months after the matter was first reported to the Justice Department's OPR, Judge Sullivan stated that he had never received any reply or comment from the OPR about its investigation. He described this as "shocking." The implication was that the lack of ethics in the Justice Department went well beyond the original Stevens trial team, and included essentially a cover-up in the OPR; the original trial team apparently had reported themselves to the OPR so that the office's "investigation" would foreclose other investigations, and the prosecutor's misconduct could be covered up. Why has the OPR never issued a report on the serious misconduct in the Stevens case?

As yet another example, under the Bush Administration three Justice Department lawyers, John Yoo, Steven Bradbury, and Jay Bybee, prepared unprofessional memoranda authorizing torture, and based on these memoranda a whole procedure of institutionalized torture was undertaken by the United States government in clear violation of American law and treaty obligations. The memoranda were so wrong and unprofessional that they were withdrawn in 2004 by the Office of Legal Counsel.

As soon as the secrecy that shrouded the memos was withdrawn, complaints were filed with the OPR against their authors. A report by the OPR was promised at the beginning of 2009, and it was believed that the OPR had found serious misconduct by the three lawyers. Then the release of the report was repeatedly delayed until February 2010, when Newsweek reported that the OPR had cleared the three lawyers of any misconduct, finding only "poor judgment." In short, the OPR has apparently reverted to its traditional role of covering up misconduct. (See "A Slap on the Wrist" by Isikoff and Klaidman, Newsweek, February 8, 2010, p. 10).

The whitewash by the OPR completely misses the point. The problem was not poor legal judgment by lawyers trying to determine what the law required. The law clearly held that torture was illegal, and the Bush Administration wanted to find a lawyer who would write a memo saying torture was legal. That is why the administration classified the memos as soon as they were written. The classification was not intended to prevent torture information from falling into the hands of our alleged enemies—the prisoners knew that they were being tortured. It was to prevent the memos from being examined by the legal community because the administration knew that the memos were frauds and would never stand up to legal scrutiny.

The effect of the OPR report will be devastating if it finds no misconduct. In the future, whenever a president or senior government official wants to do something that is clearly illegal, he or she will only have to find a subordinate lawyer in the Department of Justice (who can be fired if he or she does not comply) to write a memorandum declaring legal what was previously illegal. Justice Department lawyers will no longer have to be faithful to the law, but only to the wishes of the politicians who appointed them.

Illegal conduct by the Department of Justice, and the failure of the OPR to act as a watchdog, is certainly nothing new. In 1998, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette ran a lengthy exposé of the extent to which the Department of Justice engaged in illegal conduct and the failure of the OPR to provide any oversight (“Win at All Costs: Out of Control” by Bill Moushey). The article states:

A two-year investigation by the Post-Gazette found that powerful new federal laws, designed to snare terrorists, drug smugglers and pornographers are being aimed at business owners, engineers and petty criminals. Whether suspects are guilty has come to matter less than making sure they are indicted, or convicted, or, more likely, coerced into pleading guilty. Promises of lenient sentences and huge government checks encourage criminals to lie on the witness stand. Prosecutors routinely withhold evidence that might help prove a defendant innocent... Those who practice this misconduct are almost never penalized or disciplined. “It’s a result-oriented process today, fairness be damned,” said Robert Merkle, whom President Ronald Reagan appointed U.S. Attorney... (November 22, 1998)

By failing to discipline lawyers in the Department of Justice who engage in misconduct, the OPR sends the signal that it will tolerate and even cover up misconduct when it occurs. This is especially true today of prosecutions against Muslims. Illegal wiretapping, use of agents provocateur, entrapment, preemptive prosecution, failure to turn over exculpatory information, and even outright frame-ups are apparently tolerated by the OPR if they involve Muslims. Prosecutors understand that the OPR will not discipline such misconduct and act accordingly.

There are almost weekly reminders of the extent to which the Justice Department has become corrupted, failed to follow the law, and is engaged in covering up its own criminal conduct and that of others.

On November 5, 2009, it was reported that twenty-two CIA agents were convicted in absentia in Italy for kidnapping an Italian citizen in Italy and illegally rendering him to Egypt, where he was tortured. It was widely reported that the CIA agents will never be sentenced for their crimes because they live in America, and that the Justice Department will not prosecute them or turn them over to the Italians, notwithstanding that their crimes—kidnapping and extraordinary rendition—are crimes under American laws, and were done by U.S. government agents. (See “Criminal Convictions of 22 CIA Agents in Italy” by Glenn Greenwald, Salon, November 5, 2009; “Italy Got It Right: CIA Renditions Are Wrong,” Los Angeles Times editorial, November 6, 2009).

On December 5, 2009, it was reported that a federal judge dismissed fraud charges against two business executives in U.S. v. Henry Samuelli and U.S. v. William J. Ruehle because of prosecutorial misconduct in tampering with critical defense witnesses and attempting to intimidate the witnesses into not testifying for the defense. (See “Charges Dismissed Against 2 Broadcom Executives,” New York Times, December 5, 2009).

On January 3, 2010, it was reported that a federal judge dismissed criminal charges against four Blackwater contractors who had murdered civilians in Iraq, on the grounds that the government’s case had been based almost entirely on statements of the defendants for which the defendants had been given immunity from prosecution. Because the prosecution’s case so obviously conflicted with the immunity granted to the defendant’s statements, it was widely assumed that the government deliberately presented a legally deficient case in order to have the charges dismissed for political reasons. (See “Another DOJ Blow—Charges Dismissed Against Blackwater Employees” by Amir Efrati, Wall Street Journal, January 3, 2010).

On January 16, 2010, it was reported that 22 million e-mails that the Bush Administration claimed did not exist had just been found, although conditions attached to their “discovery” required them to be archived for years before anyone could examine them to determine if they indicated crimes had been committed. (See “22 Million Bush-Era E-mails Found” by Steven Dubord, New American). How strange that the clandestine services are able to monitor the e-mails of well over 22 million Americans daily, and yet were unable for years to find 22 million e-mails missing from the White House, some of which had been subpoenaed in connection with a criminal probe. How even stranger that the Justice Department would agree to let the e-mails be archived for years before they would be available for criminal investigations.

On January, 18, 2010, it was reported that the Justice Department deliberately covered up the murder of three prisoners at Guantanamo. Officially, the three inmates at Guantanamo all committed suicide on the same night in 2006 by hanging themselves in their cells, in open view but supposedly unnoticed, while bound hand and foot. Later a guard made a statement indicating that the three detainees were suffocated to death under torture. The Department of Justice conspired to cover up the murders by conducting an “investigation” of the guard’s statement and the numerous inconsistencies and impossibilities in the official version of the incident, and then taking no further action. (See “The Guantanamo Suicides: A Camp Delta Sergeant Blows the Whistle” by Scott Horton, Harper’s).

On January 21, 2010, it was reported that the FBI, an agency of the Justice Department, routinely broke wiretapping laws by manufacturing fake emergencies in order to bypass the need to obtain warrants. (See “FBI, Telecom Teamed To Break Wiretap Laws” by Ryan Single, Wired; “Report Confirms FBI Misused Authority To Obtain Phone Records” by Kurt Opsahl, Electronic Frontier Foundation).

On January 27, 2010, it was reported that torture continues under the Obama Administration, relatively unchanged since the Bush Administration except that certain techniques like waterboarding have been forbidden. Perhaps this is why the Department of Justice changed the recommendation of the OPR as to finding misconduct for the three lawyers responsible for authorizing torture in the first place. (See “Torture Never Stopped Under Obama” by Shamus Cooke, Global Research).

On January 30, 2010, it was reported that an autopsy of Imam Luqman Ameen Abdullah in Detroit showed that in October 2009, during an FBI sting, the imam was lured into an FBI-run warehouse, where he was shot twenty-one times by FBI agents who then handcuffed him as he bled to death. Various civil rights organizations and Rep. John Conyers have called on the Department of Justice to investigate the shooting and also the use of FBI agents provocateur in mosques. (See “Autopsy in Imam Shooting To Be Released Monday,” Detroit News, January 29, 2010; “Conyers: Review FBI Case on Imam,” Detroit Free Press, January 14, 2010).

This is an extraordinary number of stories in a short period of time questioning the competence and integrity of the Department of Justice on extremely important issues of fundamental rights. The response of the Department of Justice has been largely silence and avoidance. When justice is made subservient to political consideration and 9/11 hysteria, we cease to be a nation of laws and become a tyranny. Is the Justice Department refusing to enforce the law impartially because of political pressure, incompetence, and a failed Office of Professional Responsibility—or is there another, more sinister explanation?

Total Information Awareness (TIA)

In 2003, a proposal was brought before Congress to fund a data mining project called TIA (Total Information Awareness) that would prepare a vast data bank of information on essentially every citizen in the country and much of the world, and then mine it for patterns of possible criminal activity. Congress voted not to fund such a program, which would clearly violate the Constitution and Bill of Rights. However, much of this database is readily available, and mining is easily done by clandestine agencies with secret budgets, such as the CIA. In 2005, a coalition of civil rights groups, including the ACLU and 185 co-sponsoring groups (The International Campaign Against Mass Surveillance/ICAMS), issued a report entitled The Emergence of a Global Infrastructure for Mass Registration and Surveillance (info@i-cams.org), suggesting that, in fact, this is just what has been done.

The ICAMS report noted that travel information (passports, flight arrangements, visa, entry permits, etc.) and financial transfer information (banks, credit cards) is increasingly available in electronic databases worldwide. E-mail and phone conversations can be secretly monitored and the data saved and analyzed. Corporations keep databases of information. Together, all this information forms a vast database ready for mining. The U.S. government already has mining programs, such as Carnivore, that can sift through the data to find possible patterns of criminal activity. Governments inevitably will try to use this information to predict criminal activity before it occurs and thus “preempt” crimes by bringing “preemptive prosecutions,” often at the expense of the individual’s civil rights. The report states:

A major paradigm shift is occurring. Governments are no longer focused on law enforcement and intelligence-gathering about specific risks. They have embarked on a much more ambitious and dangerous enterprise: the elimination of risk. In a “risk assessment” system, many of the ordinary legal protections that are fundamental to democratic societies—due process, the presumption of innocence, rights against unreasonable search and seizure and the interception of personal communications, and rights against arbitrary detention and punishment—go out the window. For the risk screeners, guilt or innocence is beside the point. What matters is the avoidance of risk from the point of view of the state, separating the risky from the safe on the basis of the best information available from all sources. (p. 2)

The report describes the signposts along the way to a “mass surveillance” society of the kind described in George Orwell’s 1984, and states in part:

The ninth signpost is what is happening to democratic societies—in terms of the erosion of democratic processes, centuries-old protections in criminal law, freedom of speech and association, and the rule of law itself as governments pursue the agenda for global mass registration and surveillance.

The tenth signpost, and perhaps the most ominous of all, is the collective loss of moral compass societies are exhibiting as they begin to accept inhumane and extraordinary practices of social control. Countries that hold themselves out as defenders of human rights are engaging directly in extra-legal rendition, torture and extra-judicial killing—as well as contracting out these services to brutal regimes, which are being rewarded for their contributions. (p. 4)

The report notes that using computer programs to search for patterns of criminal activity is highly inaccurate, both because the programs are inadequate to the task and because much of the information collected is inaccurate or even malicious. (How, for example, does a computer program evaluate whether one subject is “associated” with another, or whether a source of information has lied?) Since the data is “secret” and “classified,” there is no way for the defendant to review the material and correct the mistakes. Neither computer programs nor governments can accurately predict future criminal activity, and any justice system that tries to do so will inevitably end up convicting substantial numbers of innocent people. Yet this appears to be what the U.S. government is presently attempting to do, especially with the Muslim community.

Is this why you have ignored our earlier letters and continued practices that violate the law and the Bill of Rights? In a period of a paradigm shift, when traditional law enforcement seems old-fashioned and “risk assessment” seems to be the way to prevent future crime, do you view the Bill of Rights as a “quaint” document that is out of date and irrelevant? When the American government regularly compiles detailed files on the travel, finances, and intimate writings of all its citizens and much of the world, of what relevance is the prohibition against “unreasonable search and seizure” contained in the Fourth Amendment? When the American government routinely mines this database for patterns of potential criminal conduct with which to preemptively prosecute people before they commit a crime, of what relevance is the requirement of “probable cause” contained in the Fourth Amendment? When the American government closes down charities based on “secret evidence” contained in the database, and will not disclose the secret evidence to justify its actions, of what relevance is the “due process” clause of the Fifth Amendment? When the American government designates someone for “preemptive prosecution” based on the person’s predicted potential to commit crimes in the future, rather than on crimes actually committed, of what relevance is the requirement of an “impartial trial” guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment? The trial is only pretextual anyway; the real crime is to be listed as “suspicious” or “dangerous” by a computer program.

When the Founding Fathers created the Bill of Rights, they knew exactly what they were doing. They had just passed through a revolution in which the British had labeled them as the eighteenth-century equivalent of terrorists. They wanted to make sure that nobody would be investigated, tried, and convicted by the immense power of the state unless there were substantial guarantees that all people would be treated equally and fairly, given due process, investigated only after probable cause, and kept secure in their personal property and writings. These concerns are not quaint or old-fashioned. They are as relevant today to the present war on Terror as they were to the Founding Fathers and the American Revolution. Indeed, the Bill of Rights was intended to apply in times of war as well as peace—the Constitution permits the writ of habeas corpus to be suspended during times of war, but there is no such limitation on the Bill of Rights.

In the end, it is simply easier to follow the law than to disregard it. It is easier to enforce the law equally than to throw away the moral compass and enforce only what the politicians and expediency demand. As president and attorney general, you have taken oaths to uphold the Constitution, including the Bill of Rights. We urge you to follow the law and give justice to the innocent Muslims who have been unfairly entrapped by a system of “risk assessment” rather than by their personal guilt.

Sincerely,

The tactics being used against Muslims at this time are shameful and frightening. We seem to have only a sham concept of "Trial by Jury," if judges can TELL the jury how to vote, and expect them to do so. I remember in college learning the origins of the term "Moot Court." I believe our justice system is becoming such a system. I pledge allegiance to the Constitution, and this is an insult to that document.

Stop the Preemptive Prosecutions , end the wiretaps, quit using agent provocateurs, and end prisons for Muslims only. Your sting system is entrapment of innocent people in the Muslim community. Restore legal protections that are fundamental to a democratic society . Extraordinary rendition and excessive spying on the American people must end. NO MORE MEMO'S AUTHORIZING TORTURE .

This administration has a duty to restore dignity and trust to the Department of Justice. As an American and as a Muslim, I want to say to Obama and Holder, that equal justice for every being is the main requisite for civilization. These cases have not gone unnoticed. There will be a point when someone will be asked to explain all the wrongful cases. This is no different than the internment of Japanese Americans during WW2. These cases also bring to mind McCarthyism witch hunts. It is another dark chapter in our good country's history. Those that fail to learn from the past, are condemned to repeat it. Free the convicts. Free the FD5.

I agree with this precedent where it applies, as it pertains to Muslims and also to any immigrant groups who are struggling with language and cultural understanding. When it is also applied to Muslims who fall within this group, this becomes a severe misunderstanding. I agree with this email because I have seen and heard about injustices being committed against people who are honest and hardworking, who were caught in something where they are in the wrong place at the wrong time. In fact, I've seen mistakes more often than I have seen actual criminals being arrested. Scarily, laws seem to protect criminals and go after innocent people. Clearly, there is a problem.

If you look at the faces of the people that voted for you, we all do. That's why we believed the beautiful lie. I have metaphorical wings and I will fly even if this "Democracy" says I can not. Mr. President, all I ask is for you to step up against the need for "security" and remember what Moses said. "Love thy neighbor." No matter if he is a Muslim, Jew, Buddhist, or believes that these all are the same. We are cut from the same cloth and the fighting must end. Look at our planet, she is tired and needs to be nursed back to health. It's our job to do that. Actually, it's my generations job to save the planet and Al Gore was destined to show us the way. I contacted Attorney General Holder when in Washington to report evidence of an international criminal conspiracy involving high US government officials. Of course, I received no answer. I just wanted to let him know that Soldiers For Peace International is aware of the crimes that he is helping to hide in plain sight. Mr Holder may think that he is "only following orders," but the same logic allowed Bush to imprison Governor Segilman and Holder has done nothing about it. The criticism of Bush was that he politicized the Justice Department, and this was a result. Failing to act on this public information makes Holder complicit in a crime that amounts to treason if tracked to its source.

I do not feel that any American or Alien who is present in the United States legally should be persecuted due to their Religious Affiliation. Muslims are currently being wrongfully arrested, but, at one time Jews were also persecuted in the United States for their beliefs and practices. Native Americans were considered to be "Savages" because they had their own Religion and World View. People should only be arrested if they break a Law of the United States, but no one should be unnecessarily persecuted for their Religious Faith.

Nicholas Geary Any person who monitors Attorney client conversations, denies the RIGHTS of due process, challenging their accusers and their accusations is not only violating the founding principals of America, but are themselves acting criminally. A balance must be found to identify and monitor Al Qaeda without abolishing or degrading the principles this country was founded upon. ANY person, politician, or party that disagree's is themselves more treasonous to the foundation of their country. The government is in a very difficult situation and the safety of the American people and cities is a high priority. However this can be done without eroding and violating the individual right's America was build upon. How can anyone morally or ethically hold someone indefinitely without due process (sometimes on suspicion)? And at the same time claim to uphold the laws and institution of America?

Marianna Khankashi This is an extraordinary number of stories in a short period of time questioning the competence and integrity of the Department of Justice on extremely important issues of fundamental rights. The response of the Department of Justice has been largely silence and avoidance. When justice is made subservient to political consideration and 9/11 hysteria, we cease to be a nation of laws and become a tyranny. Is the Justice Department refusing to enforce the law impartially because of political pressure, incompetence, and a failed Office of Professional Responsibility, or is there another, more sinister explanation?

Sadia Reza The utter injustice that resides in a country that declares itself the country of justice and freedom...absolutely sickens me. The worst thing of all though, is the fact that nothing whatsoever is being done. The government seems to be utterly apathetic to the inhumane injustice that is being perpetrated by Americans themselves. The country has an undeniable responsibility to take action, and yet nothing of real significance is being done at all. I urge you to seriously consider this, Mr. President, especially considering you promised not to follow in the footsteps of the Bush administration. There are certain promises that presidents can't always keep, but this is something that to simply ignore is to fuel inhumanity and injustice.

John Jancar This is a travesty. And I read about travesty after travesty every single day and I say ENOUGH! This policy that the West is following right now to target muslims for every 'terror' attack in their country or any other part of the world is their agenda to keep the eyes of the world upon the Muslims and take the attention of the world away from the 'War Crimes' and 'Peaceful Terrorism' that countries like the U.S. And Israel are committing in various parts of the world. You can carry this ideology forward but it's not gonna last long... However sadistically fun it may be to be racist and torture others simply because of their ethnicity and history, it is no excuse to throw away whatever is left of our human morality and values. What can Americans do to show their pride if something like this is going on? How can Americans say that justice and truth is active in America?

Jason Olszanicky Freedom of Religion is Constitutionally protected in the USA. Please do not renew the Patriot Act and end all this profiling of US Citizens. The Bill of Rights prohibits Congress from making any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, guarantees free speech, free press, free assembly and association and the right to petition government for redress, forbids infringement of "...the right of the people to keep and bear Arms...", and prohibits the federal government from depriving any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. In federal criminal cases, it requires indictment by a grand jury for any capital or "infamous crime", guarantees a speedy, public trial with an impartial jury composed of members of the state or judicial district in which the crime occurred, and prohibits double jeopardy. In addition, the Bill of Rights states that “the enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people,”

Will the world stand for a moment of silence one day beside that colossal wreck saying, “There was once a stone statue here—a statue called Liberty?” The enormous statue cries out to the world, “Liberty and Justice for All!” Yet despite the floodlights all around Lady Liberty, her voice becomes weaker, and the world begins to see that she is either deceiving or deceived. Else how could she allow those cells to be built in her very foundation? Sadly, the flame in her hand is sputtering in the storm. Will, first, the light go out on the world, and then the statue crumble? [Sami Al Hajj ; ex-detainee]

me pregunto si a todo musulman se le pone la insignia de terrorista..que ponemos a los judios o americanos?.....ser musulman significa paz..aprendanlo de memoria....me averguenzo de la justicia pues su significado es injusticia... YA ESTA BIEN.....despues Americanos teneis miedo del terrorismo y que pensais?sera que estais haciendo las cosas mal.....no se puede detener a una persona por ser musulmana....recuenden que los no musulmanes a lo largo de la historia han sido los que han cometido los crimenes mas horrendos,desde la inquisicion,esterminacion de judios,quitar las tierras a los apaches,quitar diamantes a Sierra Leona y mil cosas mas..que verguenza,gracias a Dios yo soy musulmana.dejar en libertad a ese chico o tendreis problemas

That the crimes itemized and reported in the above letter are continually being committed by the US Government is heart breaking and horrifying. What are we becoming? All the monsters of police states, totalitarian states, Nazi, fascist and communist states that we were warned against as children are coming home to roost in our own justice department. On this human rights day, it is time for whoever is reading this to risk your job, to speak the truth, to work to end these terrible bloody abuses.

I support making things right. READ THIS! Our country needs more education about Muslim beliefs. Stop ignorance. Listen to all of us who want tolerance and good will with our citizens.

Razi Muhammad

I fully endorse the view that unfair treatment of muslims and for that matter, everyone should be stopped. Preemptive prosecution is worst type of US activity against muslims. Please look at the case of Ziyad Yaghi who appears innocent from what I have read.

This is a witch hunt that stoa freedom of speech and association!

Mr. Obama and Mr. Holder. Your corruption and compliance in the unjust prosecutions of Muslim Americans is impacting real lives. Real innocent people are suffering inhumane punishments. Only you know what behind-the-scenes deals have you bound to complicity. Shame on you. One day history will justly remember your governing as monstrous and unforgiveable from a human rights standpoint. Pray for your souls and please consider a new focus on right action.

Rabia Chaudry

Dear President, As an American Muslim raising children here, I dearly love my country, the United States. This is our country, we belong to it and it is a part of us. But it is demoralizing, depressing, and horrifying to see the persecution of innocent Muslims through the abuse of law enforcement. Please stop this policy of entrapment and reopen the cases of these people who have been unfairly convicted. As the President, you are responsible for every life in this country. Government injustices are also your responsibility. I know you are a man of faith. Remember that God has entrusted you with this responsibility we will all be judged by Him one day as to our responsibilities. You are my president and I trust that you will do the right thing. Enough is enough! No more hypocrisy!

Equality is all we ask for. Stop the hate crimes against muslim Americans and muslims all over the world. Don't disregard innocent until PROVEN guilty.

I am very familiar from a first hand account of these acts of injustice and want to broadcast my concern and disappointment with the process of preemptive prosecution. I support all efforts to bring about reform.

Trish Van Aman Pres. Obama when you serve your second term it will then be time to charge the last admin with war crimes. It is apparent they do not leave the country now because other countries see they have gone against the Geneva convention in carrying out Iraq and now that Bin Laden is gone, use our Delta forces to hunt down the extremists instead of the pompous asses that started the war in Iraq for no reason except personal. In your second term you will be free to expose them and hopefully not be encumbered with the like of the diversionary tactics of social issues laid out by the GOP. Make it RIGHT!

Peter Bellamy Stop taking away innocent lives!

Violetta Rajkovic Sweden During the time from first letter, I noticed some change in a way how Muslim terror activities take course. a) overpaid informant trap some young man to do crime. The young man goes to revenge for all we see in media. FBI, magical, is at right place in right time. "terrorist" confess all and put few more names during long investigation. He gets around 15 years and other life in jail. Who has interest of it? Is it only one meaning to keep fear at non-Muslims and fuel hatred? I would like rob Bill Clinton and live as his wife. What shell FBI does with it? It is fantasy. From fantasy to reality it is huge step, few of them. Most of things we would like to do never happen.. Free Muslims but free average Americans as well Globe too.

NorahChristine RunningWolf This is shameful, Mr. President. What has happened to America that we must persecute any who are not of European/Christian descent.

Laura Schleifer It is simply inconceivable that this youth is being locked up for years on end with no trial for "guilt by association". Regardless of who his friends are--and there is nothing to convince me that his friends were planning on committing violent acts, either--he has done absolutely nothing wrong. Since when did it become a crime to visit Egypt and Jordan? Since when did it become a crime to be a young, practicing Muslim male? Since when did it become a crime to speak out against war, or to have friends that speak out against war? If it is a crime to speak out against war, then shall I be sent to jail as well? For I speak out against these barbaric, imperialistic and utterly unjust wars every day of my life. This is a young man who is not even merely averagely peaceful, but who is a downright pacifist, someone who objects to the killing of ants and who would give his last dollar to a homeless person. His political views, and/or those of his friends, against U.S. wars of aggression fit into his overall pacifist view of the world, not oppose it. I am utterly disgraced by the actions of the FBI, the federal government, and the injustice system that supposedly represent the interests of me and my fellow American citizens. This is not democracy. Rounding people of a certain religion/ethnicity up and throwing them into prison without trial for their political beliefs is something more akin to the gulags of Stalinism than any kind of "democracy". If this is a democracy, then the Powers that Be who are paid with our tax dollars to represent me and other U.S. citizens should heed our call and release Ziyad Yaghi and other innocent Muslims arrested and jailed after 9/11 immediately. Let's see if you respond in the manner of a truly democratic government.
